The system of the sheep would be by simply grazing on pasture on which the sheep might begin to graze. Dr. Wright exhibited a slide, and Mr. Henry Sharpe, of Adelson, of the province of Ontario, mounted in binoculars of the blowfly, showing the minute membranous structure whereby it appears to be able to close or protect the orifice through which it sucks the juices that form its food. It right displayed a series of test diagrams, just received from the famous German mounter, J. D. Meinel, and presented a series of slides of the anatomy of honey bees.

with the highly retentive medium of mercury and iodide of potassium (Jones, 1907). He likewise showed a slide of the highest test diatom, Thalassira pellucida, prepared by Dr. H. L. Knapp of New York, and mounted in a medium known to himself. His slides have excited great admiration at the meeting of the Royal Microscopical Society of London for the wonderful clarity with which the exceedingly minute features of this diatom were displayed. A few years ago very existence of these lines was an object of doubt, but now they are obvious and clearly defined.

Dr. Hensley mounted a slide prepared by himself of the same glass, mounted in phosphorus, and it was unanimously agreed that the resolution was quite equal to that of Dr. Smith's.

 supplied by the immense water power there. The power generated will be transmitted through a silver wire sheathed selection every Thursday. He did not see that there would be any harm in the proposed condition that the selector should be a bona fide selector, and he should support the clause as it stood.

Mr. HUTTON thought the clause should be amended by leaving out the condition of the residence, but limiting the area of conditional leases to 5000 acres. He moved an amendment to except the condition of residence.

Mr. GUINNESS pointed out where this clause would inflict great hardship.

Mr. BRECKIN thought it would be a great hardship to take away from people their existing rights. He should vote for the amendment.

Mr. SLATTERY would also vote for the amendment.

Mr. W. R. CAMPBELL said the clause would not do any hardship to the bona fide selector, who would simply have to live for another five years on his selection, provided his conditional lease adjoined it.

After some remarks from Mr. SLATTERY and Mr. BRUNKER, Mr. FLETCHER said it would be monstrous to expect a man who had already resided five years upon his selection, to reside for another five years to get his conditional lease. A man who acted in a bona-fide way should not be punished on account of those who abused the law.

Mr. GANNETT suggested that the amendment should be postponed and the clause withdrawn, so that it might be redrafted in order to embody the ideas of never intended that they should be permanent. The clause would give the pre-lease holders a five-year lease, with a right of renewal for another five years if they did not choose to purchase. Those was far better terms than they had at present. He could not consent to the postponement of the clause. It would be better for hon. members to move their amendments, and let them discuss the matter fully and fairly, and decide it as they best could. He could not accept the amendment, and should do his best to oppose it.

Mr. R. B. SMITH supported the postponement of the clause. If that were not agreed to he should vote for the amendment.

Mr. HAYDON strongly pressed his amendment, which, after considerable discussion, was carried on a division of 42 to 12.

Mr. GARNETT proposed a further amendment to limit the area of conditional purchase by virtue of which conditional leases shall be granted to any one person. 1290 acres in the eastern and central divisions; such conditional leases need not be adjoining, but must be in the same land district.

Mr. LYNN supported the amendment, which was very similar to one that he had some time ago given notice of.

Mr. VACHON also supported the amendment.

Mr. FARWELL supported the amendment, which was

Mr. FARRELL moved a new clause to provide for the erection of wharfs and jetties, in lieu of a clause previously withdrawn.

The clause was agreed to.

Mr. W. J. FRASER moved the new clause as it had been given notice, to provide for the leasing of lands for agricultural purposes on Crown lands reserved for gold fields. He pointed out that a similar provision existed in Victoria and New Zealand, and had been found to work well.

After discussion the clause was negatived by 50 to 4.

Mr. TACKETT moved a new clause to grant rental rates of three acres upon population rates of £4 per annum for five years on condition of making title to issue at the expiration of that time.

Mr. FARNELL opposed the clause, as it would give very valuable land at a price far below its value. He admitted that in some situations such a provision might be desirable, but population areas were reserved in order to allow for the expansion of towns, and they had to look at the matter in a general point of view.

The clause was negatived without division.

Mr. ARBOTHOTTEP moved a committee on the clause, as the bill provided sufficiently for family selections already. This would lead to complications and to great difficulty in proving that the condition of residence had been fulfilled.

After debate, the clause was negatived by 24 yeas.

The preamble of the bill was agreed to, and the bill was reported to the House with amendments.

The adoption of the report was made an order of the day for the following day.

The resolution carried by the Diocesan Synod with reference to religious teaching in Public schools was not an abstract, but a practical one. If the Synod is representative—as there is no reason to doubt that it is—it expresses the opinion of Episcopalians that the special religious teaching provided for by the Act ought to be given, and also that the termination that it shall be given. A special committee for promoting this work is already in existence, has collected some funds and provided some agencies; what is wanted is, that the funds should be enlarged, and the agencies multiplied. The right principle of action had already been recognised; what was needed was simply more zeal and perseverance. The bishop on his arrival finds that the right principle had already been marked out course to pursue had already been decided, but a more general enthusiasm was needed to see that that course should be followed up with success. His coming appears to have aroused that enthusiasm. The £500 subscribed is to be increased to the needed £1500. The corps of religious teachers is to be augmented, and under the supervision of the committee every school in the diocese will soon be provided with a religious teacher. . . . This is a result on which the Church of England is to be congratulated, and the colony also. Parliament had divided out the work of education, taking the secular and general religious instruction to itself, and devolving on the Churches the special religious instruction. The Churches have been a little slow to accept their part of the duty. The task in that particular form was novel, and there was needed some special effort to adapt Church agencies to the work. This dilatatoriness, though regrettable, is altogether to be wondered at. New social machinery is not made on the instant especially close on the heels of an exciting political warfare, in which new principles have been adopted, or old principles have achieved a final triumph. Some of those who fought against the introduction of the new system have loudly contended that it was impracticable, and that they and it was hardly to be expected that they should bestir themselves very vigorously to prove that it was quite practicable. Believing in a reaction of public opinion, they have preferred to wait for it to making any effort to prevent it. Time, however, always brings an assuagement of this sort of feeling. Those who believed in the desirableness of special religious teaching in the schools came to feel that it would not do to fold one's hands, and that some-sit for ever with folded hands and nothing must be done to take advantage of such teaching opportunities which the law offered.

This conviction had already taken practical now present; but we do not discuss that now. Our task is: To which do the defenders of the bill attach the more importance—the powers or the restrictions? Their liking for the bill arises from the hope that what it provides for and contemplates will be fully realised, or from an expectation that its provisions will for the most part remain dead letter? It is hard to imagine that anybody can be enthusiastic about the bill on the understanding that the colonies will generally fall back upon their independence, and decline to refer to the Council important matters within the jurisdiction of their own Legislatures. The more probable supposition is that the bill is intended to serve the purposes it purports to, and that the colonies are expected to avail themselves generally and extensively of its provisions. The bill provides for the reference to the Council of "any matter of general Australasian interest with respect to which the Legislatures of the several colonies can legislate within their own limits, and as to which it is deemed desirable that there should be a law of general application." That is to say, the bill looks forward to the gradual acquisition by the Council of fourteen (or less) of power to make laws upon all the matters of greater interest throughout Australasia. No other Council is within the purview of the bill. We should have, therefore, accepting the bill, to forecast any other such possibility of absorbing power would be conferred upon the Council constituted under the bill. To create the possibility with a clear expectation that it would never be realised would be an absurdity. To create the Council with a clear expectation that it

We draw attention, a few weeks ago, to the Grafton Lighting Company's Bill—the first of its kind that has come before Parliament. We have seen not a few private Gas Bills; but this is the first bill to give a company the powers necessary to enable it to light a town by electricity, and to take the necessary steps for the safety and security of the public. Considering the advances that have been made in electric lighting, the stage already reached, and the probability of further improvement, both in perfecting the light and in reducing the cost of its production, it is not to be supposed that Grafton will long stand alone in this matter. For some provincial towns that are unable to provide their own electric lighting, it is desirable to provide them electricity offers some marked advantages over gas. If Mr. CRACKNELL's estimates, showing the comparative cost of gas and electricity for lighting the railway workshops at Eveleigh, are correct (as after experience in England we should be glad to find they are), it may be quite possible that the electric light would be cheaper for many a small town, both in the matter of original outlay and annual expenditure. In some towns the work to be done would hardly exceed that to be done at Eveleigh. The lights would be distributed over a larger area; but, admitting that, it is surely cheaper to suspend a few wires and run a few miles of gas pipe, than to recur to this subject now because there is at present before Parliament a bill to amend the law

Tux sale of the Talget, Headington Hill, Longwarry, and Warrambool sheep will be commenced by Messrs. Ryan, Hammond, and Donkin, this morning at 10 o'clock, in Mott's Wool Warehouse. At 11 o'clock, Messrs. Wilkinson, Graves, and Lavender will, at the same place, sell the following lots of wool from the graze from the Hon. P. Russell, F.L.P., Sir, Lieutenant-Colonel Buchanan, and Messrs. J. and G. Russell. Messrs. Mott's sale was continued yesterday, and prices of the day previous were fairly maintained.

The following are the particulars of the sales of the highest-priced ram, the figure being 580 guineas. The bid of Mr. J. L. Clough, of Melbourne, was only 5 guineas less; the competition being almost exclusively confined to the gentlemen named. Mr. Clough secured the animal for £105, 7s. and 7d. quiver pensantia, three others for 105, 7s. and 7d. quiver penantia.

Mr. JOSHUA HIGGINS has addressed a letter to us on the subject of "Chicken V. High Game," in which he complains of the manner in which sheep and chickens are prepared for market. He states that poultry are to be wholesome food they should be properly dressed as soon as killed. He states that in Sydney he finds that hares are brought to market uncopped, with but few exceptions, the meat becoming carion unless the gages are allowed to escape immediately on the animal being killed; and he does not wonder that the consumption of hare should be so limited under such unfavourable circumstances. In this matter he alleges that the Government is to be regarded as complicit for they never fail to open a prosecution simply for they kill one. Hares being carion within a

REPLYING to the question of German colonisation of the London correspondent of the New Zealand Herald says:—"It is pretty clear that Germany is about to enter the lists as a colonising nation, and no one will dispute that her persistent industrial population is well qualified to form successful colonists. Whether the German Colonising Society, which now numbers about 100,000 members, will be able to secure the industrial support, contemplates turning its attention to the Pacific or the West Coast of Africa, is a moot point but there was something ominous about the remarks made recently by Prince Hohenzollern Langensberg, president of the society, that the two projects in hand must be matured secretly, to escape English and Dutch competition. This declaration would, however, appear to be a mere bluff. It is quite probable that the coast, the two nations referred to having interests both in the Pacific and Atlantic. The two independent lines of mail steamers which the Imperial Chancellor proposed to subsidise are intended to advance Germany's commercial relations with China, Japan and Corea, on the one hand, and with Australia and New Zealand, on the other. The other steamers chartered for each place, even the German steamer, will be a German post-ship, and will convey letters free of charge. The scheme has been well received by the Ministerialists and anti-Ministerialists alike, and it is hoped that it will pave the way for the realisation of the national desire for colonial commercial expansion. In 1890, when the German South Sea Commercial Company was projected, the Government was criticised by the Minister of State in the House of Commons, as the
